Aviões de guerra israelenses atingem o Irã com mísseis durante um ataque retaliatório à noite

Aviação militar israelense supostamente atingiu o Irã com mísseis durante um ataque retaliatório à noite, segundo um oficial ocidental e dois oficiais iranianos, o que sugere que o ataque incluiu recursos de fogo mais avançados do que se pensava inicialmente.

Ainda não estava imediatamente claro o tipo de mísseis utilizados, de onde foram lançados, se algum foi interceptado pelas defesas iranianas ou onde aterrissaram.

O oficial ocidental e os dois oficiais iranianos requisitaram anonimato para discutir informações classificadas.

Anteriormente, oficiais iranianos disseram que o ataque a uma base militar no centro do Irã à sexta-feira foi conduzido por pequenos drones aéreos, provavelmente lançados do território iraniano. Um grupo separado de dois pequenos drones, disseram pouco depois do ataque, foi derrubado na região de Tabriz, a cerca de 500 milhas ao norte de Isfahan.

Israel não assumiu publicamente a responsabilidade pela strike do sexta-feira e recusou-se a comentar o uso de aviões ou mísseis.

A strike de Israel ocorreu em resposta a um ataque iraniano na semana passada que o Irã disparou centenas de mísseis e drones contra Israel. A maioria dos recursos utilizados no salvo inicial foram disparados do território iraniano e interceptados por Israel e seus aliados antes de causar qualquer dano.

Por outro lado, disseram os oficiais iranianos, o exército iraniano não detectou nada entrando no espaço aéreo do Irã na sexta-feira, incluindo drones, mísseis e aeronaves. A agência de notícias estatal iraniana IRNA informou que nenhum ataque de mísseis ocorreu e que o sistema de defesa aérea do país não foi ativado.

A decisão do Irã de lançar seu ataque principalmente a partir de seu próprio solo na semana passada foi vista por Israel como uma escalada no longo conflito sombreado dos dois países. Os iranianos acreditam que o grande salvo esteja ajudando na dissuasão. Ao longo dos anos de conflito, os dois países trocaram ataques clandestinos, incluindo assassinatos alvo, ciberataques e ataques convencionais realizados a partir e dentro de terceiros países.

O ataque iraniano na semana passada foi por vez motivado por um ataque israelense em 1º de abril, que aeronaves israelenses mataram vários comandantes das forças armadas iranianas na Síria.

Ao usar drones supostamente lançados a partir do território próprio em vez do próprio, Israel aparentemente sugeriu uma disposição para amenizar o calor do conflito, ao mesmo tempo que demonstrava uma capacidade de realizar ataques que o Irã não poderia detectar.

Um oficial iraniano, membro do Corpo dos Guardiões da Revolução Islâmica, disse que mesmo que o ataque tenha 2 causado poucos danos, a probabilidade de
